Tap-Happy Travel

From crowdsourcing holes-in-the-wall to guiding travelers to a truly unexpected destination, these apps ensure your next trip will be anything but the same old thing. By Diana Hubbell

Spottly

This hot newcomer from Hong Kong is a crowdsourced series of lively travel guides. With a few swift taps, you can access hundreds of picture-based guides created by users all over the globe, oriented around different cities and themes. The guides, which are reminiscent of a Pinterest account with extensive notes, are easy to maneuver, create and share. Free; iOS.

Smith Hotels

The much-loved team behind Mr. & Mrs. Smith brings their bespoke expertise to an Apple device near you. Thanks to its slick presentation, this hotel-booking app stands out from its competition. The smart interface, loaded with gorgeous graphics, is a snap to use and the reviews of selected properties from Singapore to Sri Lanka are detailed, helpful and well-written. Smith Hotels lets you store hotel wishlists or browse boutiques by category. There's also 24/7 booking support available in Asia as well as a currency converter to keep pricing simple. Free; iOS.

NorthKoreaTravel

Planning a trip to Seoul's not-so-friendly neighbor? Unbelievable as it might seem, there actually is an app for you. Claiming to be "the most comprehensive guide to North Korea ever written"—not that there's a whole lot of competition—this just-launched app offers more than 350 photographed, geotagged attractions with descriptions, pricing and advice for traversing one of the world's least-known lands from the rare guides who have actually been there. US$0.99; iOS; Android.
